

Seminar series run as part of the Brunel
Education '

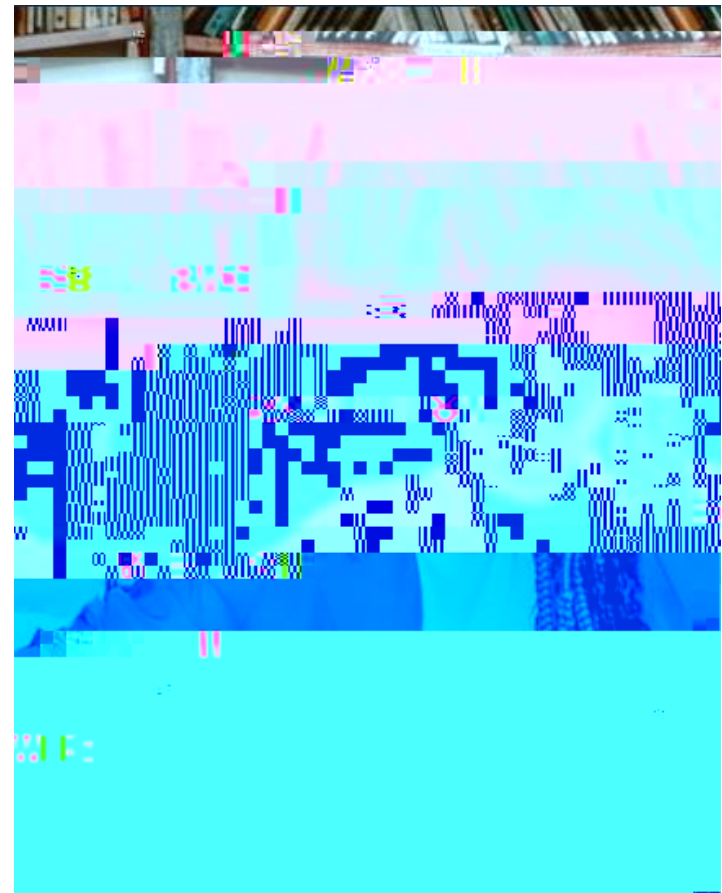

Research Group

Session 2: 26.10.21 (5-6pm)

Led by Dr Geeta Ludhra

Geeta.Ludhra@brunel.ac.uk

Twitter @educatinggeeta

Welcome and House-keeping

1. House-keeping: mutual respect, sensitivity when speaking and sharing comments in the chat, no recordings are made, feeling safe to share.
2. Previous session (Avtar Brah's paper – slides on website)
- 3.

Main Research Group Link:

Interculturality for diversity and global learning | Brunel University London

This reading group will run on a monthly-basis where sessions will be held on the last Thursday of every month, between 5-

Reading Session 2:

Pocket book: How to Stay Sane in an Age of Division

I watched her until she turned the corner at the end of the street. I had never before seen a woman so visibly broken, and yet stubbornly carrying on. I felt guilty for not opening the window and talking to her, asking if she was all right. I also felt

-4)

The complex role of the observer

Suggested prompts to explore:

How do we simultaneously remain engaged and manage to remain sane?

1. -8)
2. The role of stories and silences in stories:
(p.9)
3. Alphabetical outcasts, sounds and silences (p.12)
4. Echo chambers
5. justified anger, apathy
6. -
- 7.
- 8.
- 9.

Information, knowledge, wisdom information, less knowledge and even less wisdom. The ratio needs to be reversed. We definitely need less information, more knowledge, (p.81)

Final Reflection

of thinking for you?

Next session

28 October 2021

Reading Month 3: 25th November, 2021 (5-6pm)

Paper: Embodying diversity: problems and paradoxes for Black feminists

Author: Sara Ahmed

Journal: Race Ethnicity and Education

Details: Vol. 12, No. 1, March 2009, 41–52

I will also share a book by Sara Ahmed as further reading

Led by: Dr Geeta Ludhra

I will upload the paper to the website

Thank you for attending today

28 October 2021

On behalf of the Brunel Education
Research Group, we encourage you to visit the website and keep up with our research activities and events.

Full programme on the website.

Hope to see you in November, and other sessions in this series.

Dr Geeta Ludhra

Geeta.Ludhra@brunel.ac.uk